

Health Screening

Early detection of diseases has given us the opportunity to treat health issues before they get out of control. Today, there are more affordable screening tools available to find a disease before symptoms are even present. For instance, breast cancer deaths have steadily declined over the past decade due to better screening guidelines and the advancements in technology.